The Fish Quay can trace its origins back to around the year 1225, when Prior Germanus from the Tynemouth monastery, began a simple village of shielings (traditional basic huts) at the mouth of the Pow Burn where Fish Quay stands, today. The Fish Quay area, originally known as Low Lights, was the original focus of North Shields. As it grew up the banks, the rich built grand streets including Dockwray Square and Howard Street, which now form the basis of today's town centre.
There is now an abundance of high end, stylish bars and restaurants on the Fish Quay, and the popular Tynemouth Village is also within walking distance!
